

The image features a central text element surrounded by a collection of abstract, geometric shapes in black and pink. The shapes are scattered across the white background, creating a dynamic and modern aesthetic. Some shapes are simple rectangles or squares, while others are more complex, resembling stylized letters or symbols. The overall composition is balanced and visually engaging.

This year's A+D students present Fragments, their final year exhibition presenting work across our four disciplines, Art, Graphics, Photography and Textiles.

The show's title alludes to the exhibited work being just a part of their two-year study at Holy Cross College. Throughout the courses, the students have pushed their creative boundaries, experimented with techniques and processes and developed their own personal visual language.

The diverse range of work on display acts as a snippet of the creative potential and endless possibilities of the students as they leave college and embark on their future endeavours.

Each student has been an integral piece, or fragment, of the whole year group - contributing to a collective effort made by all our students, to develop their individual work, collaborate with one another and to share ideas and modes of making.

The culmination of their hard work and dedication to the A+D subjects is evident in the high standard, ideas driven work on display. Well done to all the students and we wish you the best of luck in the future!
